pounds each. McClellan's seconds were Billy Edwards and Arthur Chambers; Donovan's, Jos. Coyle and Billy Riley; Wm. Barnes was referee.

The men were brought to the scratch at 9:20. Up to the thirteenth round McClellan had decidedly the best of the fight, which was very lively, the men closing and fighting each other, Donovan being thrown almost every time.

In the thirty-fourth round Donovan punched McClellan severely in the body, and the latter breaking away fell winded. Donovan then forced the fighting, up to the fiftieth round having much the best of it. McClellan then began to get his second wind, and the rounds became long, both men manevrering and sparing for wind. In the seventy-second round Donovan got the first blow by a blow on McClellan's left eye. From that out cautious tactics prevailed, McClellan apparently improving over Donovan, but at the close of the ninety-fourth round, at ten minutes past 1, the referee declared the match drawn, neither having any decided advantage. The decision caused great dissatisfaction. Donovan, after going off the stage, took his position again, but was led off by his seconds. Foul were claimed several times against Donovan for hitting after his man was down, but were not allowed.

SARATOGA RACES.—Saratoga, Aug. 19.—The track was very muddy and the weather cool. No pools were sold on the mile dash. Checkmate being regarded as an easy winner in 1:46; Oriole, 2nd; Governor Hampton won the mile and one-half dash, Gabriel 2d, Emma B. 3d. Time, 2:45.

The selling race, mile and an eighth, was won by Edwin H. Dink, 2nd, Eunice 3rd; time, 2:01. Egypt was the favorite.

The hurdle race, two miles, was won by Redding, Disturbance 2d, Moonstone 3d; time 4:02.

A heavy rain has fallen in New England and the middle Atlantic states.

Newburyport experienced a storm this afternoon which was the severest in ten years.

The wind blew a hurricane, wrecking four yachts badly, wrenching steamers and schooners in the harbor and scattering about twenty small boats. The fruit trees were stripped and tents on the beach were leveled or blown into the sea.

At Newport, between twenty and thirty sail boats are sunk or damaged. The Wanners and Murrill, of the New York Yacht Squadron, parted chains and went ashore. Three yachts sank at the wharf, while others dragged anchors, fouled, and were damaged.

The crew of the schooner ashore at Cape May deserted the vessel in the evening. Their boat was capsized and the sick.

No single member of the council will be permitted to "run" this enterprise to suit himself, or to bulldoze the council or the board of water works trustees, nor will he be permitted to gratify his personal malice at the expense of the people. That might just as well be understood now as hereafter.

ILLINOIS, as usual, presents a number of candidates for the democratic nomination for president. The names of DAVID DAVIS, LYMAN TRUMBULL and JOHN M. PALMER have been most prominently named in this connection. If Illinois is to furnish the candidate why not the statesman and life long democrat, JAMES C. ROBINSON?

We print elsewhere a communication from the Hon. JESSE L. WILLIAMS, in which he estimates the saving by the use of water power in our water works for the next fifteen years at $3,000 per year or $45,000 altogether. This is a very moderate estimate, but even accepting it as true, it follows that water power should be used instead of steam. If only $100 a year can be saved it should be all means be done.

The Terre Haute Express was sold on the 14th inst. to W. R. McLean and others for the sum of $18,000.

Next year this terrestrial sphere will go up the spout. That's a settled fact. This time a fellow down in Madison says so.

Ekhart is all broke up over the action of the school board in deposing Prof. Barnett. The people want an explanation, but the board won't give it.

Elder Z. T. Sweeny, of Columbus, has received a call from England to fill the pulpit vacated by Spurgeon. Family ties will probably retain him at Columbus.

Lake, the Lafayette pedestrian, finished his 500-mile tramp at that place last Friday afternoon, having walked 500 miles in 50 consecutive hours. The last round was accompanied by a procession and a band of music.

The charges made against John R. Porter, treasurer of Miami county, that he was short in his cash account, have proven to be unfounded by a committee of experts who examined his books and found everything regular and correct.

An Indianapolis sharper is imposing on the teachers of the state, by sending them circulars stating that he is employed at the printing office where the questions for the monthly examinations are held, a copy of which he offers for $5. The Hoosier schoolmasters often bite and are galled, as they should be.

The body of a woman dressed in male attire was found on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad track at Vincennes, having a slight scalp wound. It is supposed she fell off the express train there. Nothing is known of her excepting the following note which was found on her persons: "My name is Annie Mehan, of Louisville. If anything should happen to me the person finding this will send me."

The regatta at Charlotte, N. Y., begins on the 20th. Courtney and a number of other oarsmen are on the ground.

In the single scull race of three miles and a half, at Barre, Ont., between Hanlon, Riley and Grandine, the latter got into Hanlon's water, nearly causing a collision, which was only prevented by Hanlon's fine work. Riley took advantage of the foul and pulled ahead, but he and Hanlon came to the finish nose and nose. The race will be rowed over on Wednesday.

Weston is expected in New York the middle of next week. He will be exhibited in Madison Square Garden Aug. 19th. His competitor in the late London race will also appear. He is accompanied by his wife and four children. A reception having been tendered him in Providence, his native city, he will probably show himself there on the next evening after being received in New York. He writes that he and the English pedestrians will be ready to begin the six days contest Sept. 22d, without fail.

New York, Aug. 16.—A Sun dispatch from Narragansett Pier says: The witnesses to the scene between governor and Mrs. Sprague, at Conductor Hale's house, Narragansett Pier, on Thursday, say that it was a stormy one on the governor's part. He said to his wife: "Your man got away pretty quick that time, didn't he?" to which his wife made no reply. Subsequently, speaking of Mrs. Sprague's alleged extravagance, he asked: "Where is that $6,000 you got recently? I suppose you have squandered all that?" A friend of Mrs. Sprague who was present, says that the wife received these remarks for the most part in silence, and seemed more occupied in settling the future of her children than indulging in mutual censures. She made no counter-charge of infidelity against the governor, as was at first reported.

During the past two days, since her return to Canoechat, a strict watch has been kept upon her movements, although she has been at liberty, comparatively. The governor says she can go where she pleases. She has been waited on by her maid and governess and allowed to see her children, and her husband has only interfered to prevent her communication with persons whom he regards as hostile to him.

A party of lawyers and personal friends of Gov. Sprague were standing at the library window when your correspondent drove up to Canoechat today. A ring at the door brought two of them out, but it was a long time before they could be induced to communicate with Mrs. Sprague. At length the correspondent was invited into a small retiring-room, where the governor was sitting.

betrayed traces of the distress he has so recently suffered, but he rose and welcomed the visitor cordially, with outstretched hand. He said very little beyond the fact that he hoped by keeping his wife quiet for a few days, and beyond the reach of distressing influences, to produce a frame of mind in which she would come to an understanding upon her future position toward him. The governor then turned toward Mr. Watson and said: "Take the gentleman to Mrs. Sprague." The correspondent was conducted up a winding staircase to the second floor, where a broad doorway opened into an elegantly furnished apartment. Mrs. Sprague occupied an arm chair near the table, and rose to receive her guest. She was extremely pale, but her manner betrayed only the slightest trace of agitation. Once or twice her lips trembled, but in general she preserved a most admirable self-posse, speaking calmly, but earnestly.

THE WIFE'S STORY.

"I have sent for you," she said, "because I wish to correct some false impressions which have gone abroad in regard to my conduct at Thursday's meeting. I did not charge my husband, as has been stated, with untruthfulness, nor did I make the verbal attacks upon him which I have been represented as doing. On the contrary, I bore with meekness the unmanly sneers and reproaches that she showered upon me. I have my story to tell, and when the truth is known I shall be justified. God knows that I have no reason to fear the truth, though for thirteen long years my life has been a constant burden and drag upon me. For years I have had this thing weighing upon me, and have striven with all my might to stand between my husband's wrong doing and the public. I have done it for the sake of my children, not for any affection that existed between us, for there has been none for years. This whole miserable affair into which Senator Conkling has been wantonly dragged without a particle of reason or excuse, originated in a business transaction between himself and my husband of so trivial a nature that you would be astonished that any sane man would consider it a source of jealousy. For years I have known Senator Conkling just as from the position of my father and my husband; I have known scores of other public men in Washington.

I HAVE KNOWN HIM FROM THE TIME I WAS A CHILD,

and my husband has known him for years. Two years ago they were on perfectly good terms. I was visiting at my house, "Edgewood," near Washington, and when my husband came on a visit to me Senator Conkling was one of the gentlemen who called upon us. Up to that time his name had never been mentioned by my husband otherwise than with respect. A year ago July Mr. Sprague went to Washington a lot of young colts and young horses and fillies which he had picked out for his own use at the winding up of his estate. He wished me to use those I wanted for riding and driving, and have the rest put somewhere near the city. He came on himself, and was looking about for a place to pasture them, when Mr. Conkling told him of some farmer in the neighborhood who was taking care of his (Conkling's) horse. Mr. Sprague accepted the suggestion with pleasure, and Mr. Conkling introduced him to the farmer. When October came the man sent his bill, which I forwarded to Mr. Sprague in Rhode Island. The bill was sent again and again, and always returned unpaid, until I began to feel scandalized. Then the man applied to Senator Conkling, and then threatened to sue him. Having, by the introduction of my husband, become surety for its payment, Mr. Conkling was finally to Mr. Sprague, telling him the position in which he was placed, and on a subsequent visit to Washington again called on Mr. Sprague and asked him to settle it. He told my husband that he could not be expected to pay any lady's bill, least of all a married lady's, and that it would be an insult to propose it, but that he (Mr. Conkling) would gladly give my husband the money to pay it out of his own pocket, and let him repay it whenever he would. When I heard of this I was naturally indignant, and chided my husband for allowing the senator to make such an offer, and said that I would sell anything I had to raise the money rather than accept such assistance. And yet this petty, contemptible quibble was the commencement of all my husband's jealousy against Mr. Conkling. Even after that he consented to receive him, and voluntarily went on to Washington in April last to get the senator's legal opinion in regard to the troubles between governor and Mrs. Sprague, at Conductor Hale's house, Narragansett Pier, on Thursday, say that it was a stormy one on the governor's part. He said to his wife: "Your man got away pretty quick that time, didn't he?" to which his wife made no reply. Subsequently, speaking of Mrs. Sprague's alleged extravagance, he asked: "Where is that $6,000 you got recently? I suppose you have squandered all that?" "Did he write such a letter?" "So Mr. Chase tells me, and I have every reliance upon his word. Mr. Sprague is just as wild on the subject of Prof. Linck as he is in the case of Mr. Conkling. There were others who exhibited far more interest than I. I sat before Mrs. Cameron, and I remember that Mr. Cameron himself, in his excitement rushed down the marble staircase, two steps at a time, in order to get on the floor before the trouble was over. The report that I WROTE NOTES TO MR. CONKLING on that occasion is a shameless falsehood. I certainly would not do so. Obviously it would be an improper and unladylike action. The same absolute contradiction is due from me of the stories of my remaining out at late hours and meeting Mr. Conkling at the capitol. I am compelled to speak plainly of these outrageous slanders because of their wide publicity. Of all the crop of slanders which have sprung up, I loathe to speak of those things, but they have been dwelt upon until, instead of monstrous falsehoods they appear to the public by admitted facts. At the proper time and in the proper place, I will show the true character and origin of the persecution. I can honestly say that I want the truth about this matter to be known at the proper time."

No single member of the council will be permitted to "run" this enterprise to suit himself, or to bulldoze the council or the board of water works trustees, nor will he be permitted to gratify his personal malice at the expense of the people. That might just as well be understood now as hereafter.

ILLINOIS, as usual, presents a number of candidates for the democratic nomination for president. The names of DAVID DAVIS, LYMAN TRUMBULL and JOHN M. PALMER have been most prominently named in this connection. If Illinois is to furnish the candidate why not the statesman and life long democrat, JAMES C. ROBINSON?

We print elsewhere a communication from the Hon. JESSE L. WILLIAMS, in which he estimates the saving by the use of water power in our water works for the next fifteen years at $3,000 per year or $45,000 altogether. This is a very moderate estimate, but even accepting it as true, it follows that water power should be used instead of steam. If only $100 a year can be saved it should by all means be done.

In the single scull race of three miles and turn, at Barre, Ont., between Hanlon, Riley and Grandeur, the latter got into Hanlon's water, nearly causing a collision, which was only prevented by Hanlon's fine work. Riley took advantage of the foul and pulled ahead, but he and Hanlon came to the finish nose and nose. The race will be rowed over on Wednesday.

Weston is expected in New York the middle of next week. He will be exhibited in Madison Square Garden Aug. 19th. His competitor in the late London race will also appear. He is accompanied by his wife and four children, a reception having been tendered him in Providence, his native city, he will probably show himself there on the next evening after being received in New York. He writes that he and the English spectators will be ready to begin the six days contest Sept. 22d, without fail.

THE CONKLING-LAMAR AFFAIR?

"I was, and in company with the wives of several distinguished senators. The story that I almost fainted at the idea of an encounter between Senator Conkling and Senator Lamar utterly false. I hardly knew of the affair until it was over, and can ascertain that I exhibited no other feeling than as a warm personal friend of Mr. Conkling. There were others who exhibited far more interest than I. I sat before Mrs. Senator Cameron, and I remember that Mr. Cameron himself, in his excitement rushed down the marble staircase, two steps at a time, in order to get on the floor before the trouble was over. The report that on that occasion is a shameless falsehood. I certainly would not do so. Obviously it would be an improper and unadvisable action. The same absolute contradiction is due from me of the stories of my remaining out at late hours and meeting Mr. Conkling at the capitol. I am compelled to speak plainly of these outrageous slanders because of their wide publicity. Of all the crop of slanders which have sprung up, but they have been dwelt upon until, instead of monstrous falsehoods, they appear to the public by admitted facts. At the proper time and in the proper place, I will show the true character and origin of the persecution. I can honestly say that I want the truth about this matter to be known at the proper time."

THE LATE MRS. CATLIN.

Mrs. Lucy Catlin died at home, 105 West Berry street, 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Her death was caused in part by the decay of old age, but was chiefly the result of a stroke of paralysis sustained about twelve years ago.

She was born at Shoreham, Vt., on the 21st of August, 1795, and conse-quently was at the time of her death eighty-three years, eleven months and twenty-six days. In January, 1822, she was married to Bushard Catlin, also of Shoreham, with whom she lived up to the time of his death, which occurred in November, 1860, at Spencerville, De-Kalb county, Ind., whence they had moved in 1844.

She was the mother of three chil-dren, two of whom, Mrs. M. C. Evans (now of Riverside, Cal.) and Mrs. R. A. Morris of this city are left to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Catlin was a most estimable lady, of decided Christian character, of sterling integrity and deep religious conviction. She was a very tower of spiritual strength. Her death leaves a vacancy that will be hard to fill and although she lived far beyond her three score years and ten, she had not outlived her usefulness; but "in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in its season," she was "gathered to her people," honored, respected and revered by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

She has been for several years a member of the Second Presbyterian Church. She was always prompt in her attendance and "witnessed a good profession." She was a careful and diligent reader of the Bible; having the truth in her heart, the practice in her life, and the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost progressive in her soul. Her life was a witness for Christ, her death a glorious triumph in the faith of the gospel.

Blessed are the dead who die in Lord from henceforth yes, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their woes do follow them.

THE "CIRCUSPREACHER."

Evidence that "The Evangelist and Temperance Orator" is a Dead Bearded Fraud.

A Word of Warning Previous to His Performance at Mass Temperance Jubilee in Minneapolis.

Saint Paul and Minneapolis Pioneer, June 21, 1878.

Under the head of "Mass Temperance Jubilee," there appeared in these columns yesterday, the following local news:

In the same article the docto-enters into detail as regards catarrh, and though he says in it nothing that is new to me or what I have not seen yet, published or otherwise, I desire to give my experience in treating over a thousand cases of catarrh, and to proclaim to the profession my conviction that it is a curable disease.

This belief arises from a very careful observation of these cases, treated until a cure was established.

Jonathan Haskell, the evangelist and temperance orator, thirty-five years with a circus, known as the "Circus Preacher," with Miss Anne G. Fenn, the Pennsylvania organist, opera and gospel singer, with a grand quartette jubilee club of vocalists, will commence a series of meetings in Minneapolis, Tuesday June 24. All singers that will join in these temperance efforts, or a grand chorus, will please report to Miss Fenn, at her parlors in the Merchants' Hotel, on Tuesday June 24th, before 12 o'clock m.

We give it a second insertion without charge, for the purpose of giving the public a word of caution before the arrival of the aforesaid "circus preacher," as information reached us yesterday which seems to stamp Haskell as a dead beat and a fraud.

A gentleman called at this office yesterday who has just returned from a trip to Iowa, who encountered the circus preacher, and saw and heard a good deal of and about him. This gentleman heard the "circus preacher" speak.

SWALLOWS A TROOPER,

on several occasions, which don't seem to be just the thing for an evangelist to do, and his reputation in that section of the country, where he has been holding a series of meetings, is said to be fragrant!

When our informant saw him, he was not holding "temperance jubilee," but aided by the woman who accompanied him, was giving entertainment at ten to fifteen cents admission. The gentleman attended one evening and listened until disgusted. The woman sang, Haskell, read selections, she sang again, and then Haskell indulged in a rambling, random talk, in which he was not at all complimentary toward clergymen, and denounced portions of the Bible in unmeasured terms, as obscene and unfit to read. He also dubbed temperance hotels as and said various other things one would hardly expect from an evangelist and temperance orator.

The papers of that section are open and loud in denouncing him. The Hancock Signal, for instance, says, among other things, in an article of three-fourths of a column devoted to him: "He went in and said: "Got any 'anticheater narratives?" Being told yes, he said,

"Now I know where I am." He drank his cocktail and said, "That's good, but there is no place like 'Home,'" but there is no place like "Home," that ever struck the country." In addition to this we have letters from responsible parties enclosing twenty extracts from Iowa papers confirming the above, together with a letter from the chief of police of San Francisco, describing Haskell as follows:

"I inclose a photo of one J. S. Haskell, known here as 'Doc' Haskell. This is a portion of his record: Native of Massachusetts, aged fifty-eight, height five feet six inches, hair brown, mixed with gray, eyes light gray and full, wrinkled face, mud fingered and cross strapped, as follows: Family carriages, driving carriage, carriage, carriage, diamond phantoms, O. Desperate Conflict of an Allen County Farmer With a Gigantic Reptile.

Wonderful Presence of Mind in the Face of Deadly Peril.

The Battle For Life, and How it Resolved.

A Veracious Contribution to Current Snake Literature.

A number of snake stories have been going the rounds of the press, a large majority of which are rather "fairy" than snaky, but for a genuine story, the facts of which can be easily ascertained, as all the parties concerned are well known and will corroborate it in every particular, the following "lays over the deck."

Jacob Rishel, a farmer living twelve miles northeast of this city, in Jackson township, last Saturday evening, while returning from work had occasion to pass through a field of high grass. He had just reached the farther side of the field when he heard a loud noise behind him. Looking back he noticed the tall grass waving about and being agitated in very violent manner, having the exact appearance of

A SMALL WHIRLWIND, only the grass was not twisted but was rather crushed and broken down, leaving a swath about eight feet wide behind it. Mr. Rishel was naturally alarmed, as it was then almost dusk and he was nearly half a mile from any house. His first supposition was that it was a whirlwind, and, as it was coming directly towards him at almost lightning speed at a distance of not over 100 yards, he started to run as rapidly as possible at right angles from the course the storm was taking. Imagine his consternation to see that whatever it was—also change its course, and again head directly for him and only a short distance behind—so close, in fact, that he could distinctly see that it was something more than "wind" and nothing less than a huge reptile or monster the like of which he had never seen before. He realized now that it was

A RACE FOR LIFE, and started, again at right angles. The reptile changed its course with him; but Mr. Rishel saw that he had gained a yard or two by the manoeuvre. He continued running a short distance, not daring to look behind him, and then again changed his course and by a succession of doublings soon found himself in a corner of the field where dodging was no longer possible and his pursuer so close upon him that, as Mr. Rishel says, "I could smell his breath." A reaper was standing in the corner of the field preparatory to cutting the grass on the morrow, and Mr. Rishel ran around it, thinking

THE REPTILE CLOSE BEHIND HIM. The reaper stood, as stated, in the corner of the field, about four feet from one fence and six feet from the other. In running around it he made a decided gain and got in the rear of the "snak." Here, for the first time, he had a good view of the beast, a huge reptile almost forty feet in length, with head erect, and most singular of all, it had a pair of horns or feelers projecting one from each side of the head, looking somewhat similar to the tentacles of a devil fish, but were about three feet in length. The reptile followed Mr. R. around the reaper, but owing to its length and the short space between the machine and the fence, it was comparatively easy for him to keep out of its way. He, however, was fast becoming exhausted, and knew that he could not keep the race up all night, which appeared probable, as the serpent showed no signs of relinquishing the chase, but with head erect and mouth open, thrashing its feelers around in a terrible manner, in the meantime emitting a most

HORRIBLE HISsing SOUND, more like a roar than a hiss, it was making its utmost endeavors to reach and strike the terrified man. Even in his fright Mr. R. realized that although he might get over the fence in safety his pursuer would do the same, and having him again in an open field the race, as his present exhausted condition, would soon be terminated. Seeing a scythe hanging on the fence, by which he passed each round, a wild hope flashed into his brain that by the means of this he might yet

SAVE HIMSELF, and he at least resolved to make one desperate effort in that direction. He says that he knew he suffered a terror and fear never experienced by mortal man before; yet he never lost his presence of mind in the slightest degree. Passing close to the fence he grasped the scythe, and while running unloosed it from the snath and threw the latter out of his way. Slackening his pace, he suffered the reptile to approach quite close to him, and then suddenly whirling, struck at his pursuer with the long scythe blade, and fortunately succeeded in severing one of its "horns" close to the head. With an unearthly noise

TWO REPTILE LEAPED FORWARD and almost succeeded in reaching its intended victim. Encouraged by his first attempt, he again struck at the animal, but missed it, as he did again and again while passing around the machine the second time. After his first stroke, and being on the side toward the field with the serpent on the side next to the fence, the latter, now thoroughly enraged, attempted to spring over the cutter bar of the machine directly at Mr. Rishel. This attempt was not successful, but the body being in a curve, and not having the strength to support it sprang with its body directly against one of the guards of the bar, which was elevated about ten inches from the ground and, being sharp, penetrated the skin about four feet from the head, and being a sort of a harpoon shape, held the snake firmly. Mr. R. seeing his advantage summoned all his remaining strength and courage, and with his providential weapon by a well directed blow completely severed the head from the body. Mr. Rishel realized what he had done, and the suspense was gone the reaction came on. He staggered a few feet and fell to the ground in a dead faint, while the monster was thrashing and writhing a few yards away. Mr. R. laid there for about two hours and recovered just as his friends, becoming alarmed at his prolonged absence, came up to him with lanterns on the search. He related his terrible encounter, and the snake was laid out and found by actual measurement to be 34 feet and 3 inches in length and about as thick in the middle as the flesh part of a man's leg, although Mr. Rishel says that in the excitement he thought it was 100 feet long and as thick as a barrel, and says that had the snake not been dead and measured before his own eyes he would have been willing to take his solemn oath that it was fully a hundred feet in length. This may perhaps account for some ridiculous and absurd snake stories which are afloat. The tentacles spoken of were about forty-two inches long and about two inches in diameter where they joined the head. The head was remarkably small for the size of the snake and was flat, something of the nature of a flat-head snake. The color was precisely like that of the garter snake on a large scale, with a dark green stripe running down the back. The snake was skinned and the skin sent to Chicago where it will be stuffed and placed on exhibition.

Mr. Rishel was ill for several days afterwards and an attack of brandy was anticipated, but this new calamity was happily averted. To day was, however, the first time he has been out of the house since the encounter. His hair, which was already beginning to turn slightly gray, is now as white as the driven snow.

He stated to the SENTINEL reporter who interviewed him that he had not intended to say anything about the matter, and that his friends had promised to maintain the strictest secrecy in regard to it, but that during the past two days several persons had asked him about it, and as he supposed it would all come out any how, he would rather make the statement himself than to have any exaggerated report of the affair published.

THE REPTILE CLOSE BEHIND HIM.

The Red and Blue Stocking female base ball clubs arrived in this city from Detroit this morning at 6 o'clock and repaired at once to the Robinson House. The tossers are eighteen in number, and comprise the following named ladies: Minnie Stacey, Tillie Sheldon, Georgie Southbaum, Maud Pierce, Retta Howard, Josie Arnold, Florence Taylor, Lizzie Brooks, Nellie Harding, May Addison, Joe Howard, Kate Moore, Eva Clifford, Hatice Howard, Bella Lewis, Verona Carroll and Laura Gray; accompanied by W. S. Moore, the advanced agent; Harry Morris, the manager; John Walsh, contracting agent; Chas. Dooley, in charge and umpire; and W. S. Fox, treasurer.

The game is now in progress at the grand ground.

The clubs, which are designated as the Red Stockings of New York and the Blue Stockings of Philadelphia, were organized about the 1st of May, and are composed of ladies taken from the ranks, as it were, none of them being professional gymnasts. They played their first match game on the old Atlantic grounds at Philadelphia on July 4th to a crowd of 15,000 spectators. They are all ladies of respectability, and their efforts in this direction to earn an honest livelihood should not detract an atom from their reputation. There is not the least fraction of immorality in their exhibition, and notwithstanding public sentiment ladies have as perfect a right to dress in tights as have professional players of the opposite sex. From this point they will go to Logansport, Lafayette, Indianapolis and then through Illinois.

This is the first amateur club of the kind ever organized in this country. A similar scheme was attempted by a man named Wilson, in New York about seven or eight months before, who played his games in a tent. His project, however, proved a disastrous failure, and was soon abandoned. The present management, however, are making an evident success out of their enterprise.
